BIG ARMY AND NAVY

General Carter Says Country Needs Many Fighting Men.

DAY OF BAYONET CHARGES PASSED

Commander of the Department of Missouri Pays Tribute to Old Soldiers of the Army of the Potomac—Patriotism Stirred Up.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—The need of a large standing army and navy in the United States and the revival of a more active interest in these institutions by young men of today was sounded by Gen. W. H. Carter, commander of the Department of the Lakes. In an address at the eighteenth annual banquet of the Western Society of the Army of the Potomac.

Gen. Carter also explained the vast difference between war of today and what it was forty years ago; that it is now more of a scientific than a mere fighting game.

"But all that science has done for war utensils does not amount to a drop in the bucket compared with the spirit of patriotism engendered by the traditions which you veterans have founded by your fighting. The days of bayonet charges and hand to hand fighting are passed."

BIG GUNS NOT WORTHLESS.

Crozier Says Reduction of Charge Will Increase Life Fourfold.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—General Crozier, Chief of Ordnance, called attention yesterday to a misapprehension of his statement in his annual report, in regard to the effect of erosion on the heavy guns of the sea-coast fortifications.

Because the limit of life of the largest of these guns has been stated by Gen. Crozier to be about sixty rounds after which the bores are so worn that the projectiles no longer take the rifling, he said it has been assumed in some quarters that the guns are useless and that they will have to be supplanted with others.

This he pointed out is very far from being the case. The guns will remain, and their life can be prolonged three or four fold by reducing the charge of powder and the velocity of the projectiles.
